

Arsela Gjonaj is an Albanian legal professional, media creator. She is known for her dual career path, balancing a professional background in law with a deep-seated passion for cinema and the arts.

Early Life and Education

Arsela Gjonaj grew up in Vlorë, Albania, where she completed her high school education. She later moved to Italy to pursue higher education, earning a degree in Law.

Professional Career

Her professional life is characterized by her work in the legal field and her engagement with Albanian public institutions:

- Legal Expertise: She has worked as a specialist for the Municipality of Tirana and has served as a lecturer at Albanian University.
- Renewable Energy Sector: She also holds an affinity for the renewable energy sector, where she continues to work and advise.
- More recently she continues her professional career while integrating into the local artistic community.

Media and Arts

In addition to her legal work, Arsela is a prominent figure in the promotion of Albanian art and culture within the diaspora:

ARS ZONE: She is the creator and moderator of the podcast

"ARS ZONE," a platform dedicated to discussing cinema and highlighting the work of Albanian artists living abroad.

Acting: Gjonaj has ventured into acting, appearing in the film Putain d'amendement. She is also credited as a "Neighbor" (Voisine de la chambre d'Adam) in the 2026 drama film L'intérêt d'Adam (The Interest of Adam), a Belgian-French co-production.

- Cultural Commentary: She is a frequent guest and contributor to media outlets such as Shqiptarja.com and TV Klan (on the show Rudina), where she discusses the intersection of law and the arts, as well as the challenges and successes of migration.

Summary of Identity

Arsela Gjonaj describes cinema as an "irreplaceable passion" and uses her platform to act as a "bridge between worlds," connecting her legal training with her creative pursuits and her Albanian roots with her European residence.
